

Protection of Personal Information Regulations — 2025 amendments

POPIA REGULATIONS 2025 AMENDMENTS — PLAIN OVERVIEW

What changed for ordinary people

- You may object to certain processing free of charge on a form substantially similar to the prescribed form, via hand, fax, post, email, SMS, WhatsApp, or other expedient means.
- Telephonic objections can be valid if recorded by the responsible party and made available on request.
- Requests to correct, delete or destroy personal information follow similar accessible channels; responsible parties should notify you of outcomes (including within stated timelines in the Regulations).
- Direct marketing by electronic communications requires explicit consent; opt-out alone is not consent under s 69(2) themes.

What changed for organisations / lawyers

- Information officer compliance frameworks must be continually improved.
- Complaints processes to the Information Regulator clarified (acknowledgement / reference within prescribed periods).
- Administrative fines may be payable in instalments based on financial circumstances (new Regulation themes).

Steps if your data was misused

1. Write to the information officer (use LulaGazette POPIA template).
2. Keep proof of sending.
3. Escalate to the Information Regulator if ignored: <https://inforegulator.org.za>

NOTE: Summary based on publicly reported 2025 amendments for educational use. Verify Gazette text.

— End of curated extract. Verify official text before reliance. —